

“ FeneVision lets us create our vision of the future”

We needed a system to help us efficiently drive production from order processing to the loading dock, to help us achieve our vision for the future. We got all that – and more – with FeneVision. I've been with Polaris for 17 years, most recently as production scheduler. Today, I'm charged with integrating the front office with operations in our more than 300,000 square feet of manufacturing and inventory in two facilities. FeneVision does that better than anything else we looked at. It was clear from the beginning that the FeneVision people understood our business. We told them our ideas, and they gave us a system that exceeded our expectations. Fenevision allows our customers to send orders electronically through our order entry system, then effectively translates this data directly to the manufacturing floor. We've seen significant reduction in errors and an equally significant increase in speed and efficiency. It optimizes schedules right from the office, then sends batched jobs to the machines. Because the optimization is done for them, it's much easier for our operators to start and finish work. Most of all, we now have more control over more choices, true flexibility that lets us do more. And FeneVision is easy to use, even when handling complex problems. If you know how to work with a bill of materials, you know how to use FeneVision. It's been a good thing. And it's going to keep getting better.
